harmful chemicals and ingredients they wouldn’t knowingly eat at home or cook for their family. For instance, YogiBalls uses only extra virgin and organic olive oil, or high oleic, organic sunflower oil, known to be healthy for the heart for their higher monounsaturated fat content.

“I am passionate about bringing good, healthy products to consumers without compromise. Healthy food doesn’t have to taste bad. In fact, it can be better. Good, pure ingredients always taste better than chemicals,” says Manjari Saha, Founder, YogiBalls.

There are many ways to enjoy this yogurt delicacy. It can be had on toast or on crackers, served to guests in a jar, put on a salad like a garnish, or consumed like steak or fish. The snack is probiotic and thus good for the digestive system and a healthy alternative to junk food.

In today’s environment, when people have realized the importance of a fit lifestyle and a healthy body, YogiBalls has a good role to play. As consumers begin to pay attention to ingredients printed on labels, or the origin of their food, brands like YogiBalls will be preferred over what the global conglomerates are selling.
